...TEXT: not purchase a lottery ticket in the past month.

Procedure

The study was conducted using lottery -eligible adults in a major U.S. city in a high-volume lottery state. Two trained interviewers recruited subjects using an intercept technique at various locations throughout the city to capture a broad representation of the population. After being screened as...

...were asked to participate in a survey regarding state-sponsored lotteries. First, subjects reported past lottery -playing behavior, based on the previous month's lottery purchases, for each of the five types of lottery games offered by the state; these five responses were summed to form an overall measure of lottery play. Second, subjects received one of two "sample play slips" designed for what was described as "an anticipated lottery game." The game, called "High 5," was one in which players choose five ordered digits...

...result in a prize of $50,000 (i.e., a typical 50% expected value). (A lottery play slip is a form on which players mark their desired number selections and then submit it with payment to an authorized lottery retailer to receive an official lottery ticket.) One group received a play slip that included the psychological control warning, and the...

...group received a play slip without any warning. Subjects were asked to examine the new lottery game play slip carefully, after which they completed measures for dependent variables, manipulation checks, and demographic information.

Manipulation

The informational warning label was printed in a box at the bottom of...

Money Orders

Money orders are another lucrative financial service, and like check-cashing, location is crucial, according to Maggie Burby, banking operations manager at Stewart's Ice Cream Company...

...Y., is currently examining money orders on a store-by-store basis to see if demographics warrant continuing the service. Currently 59 of Stewart's stores offer money orders. "We've found, for example, that money orders do particularly well for us at our locations in inner cities, particularly where there are high lottery sales," Burby said.

"There is a $500 paper limit, meaning that if a customer requests a
